The Northern papers are having a good deal to say because a circus is going to show in Oyster Bay in a few days. The Oyster Bay people are surely entitled to some variety.

It is stated that Col. Bryan wrote his Madison Square Garden speech while at sea. He probably feels more at sea since he has discovered that a portion of his speech won't stick.

The Cuban insurrectionists put the blame on the Palma administration. Somehow or other 'administrations" never were very popular with some people. They are naturally "agin" the government.

A "Greater, Deeper Harbor" movement has been started at Norfolk by the commercial bodies and business men. It is also a good time for Wilmington to begin business on the same line. The need of it has recently been painfully emphasized.

...numerable a delegate to the New York State Democratic conventions, declines to be a delegate to the one soon to assemble at Albany. Does this mean that "something told him" before hand that he can't stand for what the convention is likely to do?

The wishy-washy politician may as well take a seat on the toboggan. If a politician hasn't got the courage of his convictions he will stand a poor chance among the people who demand that the man who runs for office shall show his colors without changing them afterward.

The Morning Star enters its eightieth semi-annual volume today. With added years, we have abundant reason to believe that it has grown in popular favor. In circulation and advertising support it is stronger than ever before, and we trust its fortieth year may prove one of advancing success.

Secretary Taft is at present engaged in a task which may have fallen to his share from the hand of destiny. He has ably filled many positions, and if he succeeds in a statesmanlike way in untangling the web in Cuba he will no doubt be the Republican nominee for President in 1908. P. S.—Well he will be.

The Greensboro Weekly Tar Heel (Rep.) says: "Secretary Shaw stated in his speeches in North Carolina that the Democratic party was striving for a policy by which to win rather than a policy by which to help the American people." Nevertheless, the same Shaw praises Roosevelt for carrying out a policy to be found in the Democratic National platform and conspicuously absent from the Republican platform.

SHIPPING REPORTS.

Reports of Disasters From Along the Coast Continue to Reach Southport.

THE FIRST CARGO OF COTTON

Cleared Aboard British Steamer Petunia Yesterday—Anglo-Saxon Has Arrived—Westlands In From Hamburg—Barque Ashore

Reports continue to come in from Southport with the arrival of every craft of further disaster to shipping off this coast during the fearful storm of last Monday morning. On the steamer Sea Gate, which came up to Wilmington yesterday morning was Capt. Sayres, master of the schooner R. D. Bibber, who with a negro seaman, was rescued from a piece of wreckage in the open sea by the crew of the schooner Georgetta Lawrence Friday morning. Capt. Sayres, from the long exposure, is still without the use of his lower limbs which hung in the water for five days and nights and he has been sent out to the Marine Hospital here for treatment.

The steamer Compton arrived last night from Little River, S. C., and brought with her the crew of the four-masted schooner Cassie F. Bronson, which is high and dry and sinking in the sand on the beach at Little River. The sailors will probably ship here. The captain and mate are at Conway, S. C., trying to arrange for wreckers to get the vessel afloat again. Capt. Jacobs, of the Compton, also reported the schooner Joel F. Sheppard, 495 tons, Capt. Megee, coal laden from Philadelphia to Savannah, Ga., anchored about 20 miles off Little River. She had part of her rigging carried away but is awaiting favorable weather to proceed. The Compton further reports that Friday night a barque, name unknown, went ashore on Frying Pan shoals, but was subsequently floated with the assistance of the fishing steamer Wharton and was being towed into Southport at last accounts by the Wharton. The barque also had a trying experience in the storm and was endeavoring to get in over the bar when she went ashore.

Messrs. A. D. Cummins and I. H. Matthis, of Philadelphia, representing the owners of the schooner Job H. Jackson, the derelict of which was towed into Southport Friday morning, reached the city yesterday to look after their interest, and Mr. J. P. Maloney, a ship broker of Charleston, also arrived to look into the matter of other wrecked vessels in this port.

The British steamer Westlands, 2,001 tons, Capt. Granger, arrived last night from Hamburg, Germany, with a cargo of fertilizer constituents, and the Anglo-Saxon, 2,671 tons, Capt. Moore, arrived during the day from New York, for cargo of cotton from Messrs. Alexander Sprunt & Son.

The British steamer Petunia, Capt. Frankland, cleared yesterday for Liverpool, with the first cargo of cotton for export from Wilmington this season. It consists of 5,460 bales, valued at $265,300 and is consigned by Messrs. Alexander Sprunt & Son. Last year by this time there had been three cargoes exported from the port and by the end of the month five cargoes had been loaded here, all larger than that taken by the Petunia yesterday.

The schooner William H. Skinner cleared yesterday, light, for Georgetown, S. C., and the schooner Jno. R. Fell, with cargo of fish scrap from the Cape Fear Fisheries at Old Brunswick.

Mr. and Mrs. J. O. Powers Bereaved.

Friends of Mr. and Mrs. J. O. Powers will sympathize with them deeply in the death of their infant daughter, Lany Boon, aged 10 months and seventeen days, which occurred at the family home, No. 824 Grace street at 1:48 o'clock yesterday afternoon. The funeral will be held this afternoon at 4 o'clock from the residence, Rev. A. McCullen officiating.

Their Infant Son Dead.

Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Vann have the tenderest sympathy of many friends in the death of their infant son, W. R. Vann, Jr., aged 12 months and 21 days, which occurred at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon at the family home, No. 805 North Seventh street. The funeral will be conducted this afternoon at 4:30 o'clock from the residence and the interment will be in Oakdale cemetery.

To those who do not keep in close touch with current events, it may be well to explain that Representative Sherman, who is pictured in the cartoon, is Chairman of the Republican Congressional Committee and one of his duties is to asign speakers to the districts most in need of Republican doctrine. In an interview given the newspapers after the result of the Maine election showed a falling off of 80 per cent., in Littlefield's former majority in his Congressional district, in which Gompers, the leader of the Labor party, made several speeches against Littlefield. Sherman said that Gompers' speeches had been a benefit instead of in injury to Littlefield. The humor of the cartoon is shown in Gompers' imaginary appearance before Sherman with the question: "Any particular district you'd like to send me?"

NO NOMINATION FOR STATE SENATE

Inharmonious Gathering of Democrats of Sister Counties at Court House Yesterday.

A STRIKING RESOLUTION

Eleventh District Convention in This City Yesterday, New Hanover Delegates Decline to Name a Man—Primary Result, However Declared.

The State Senatorial Convention here yesterday resulted in a fiasco. The delegation appointed by Chairman G. J. Boney, of the late County Convention, and his advisory committee, met the Brunswick delegates at the Court House at noon, ignored a ratification of the vote of people at the primary Wednesday, "resoluted" on the situation and adjourned. The Brunswick delegates remained in the hall, holding that they had not carried out the purposes of the convention for which no call was read and nominated Hon. George H. Bellamy, of Brunswick, as the standard bearer for Democracy in the Eleventh District. Subsequently when the vote of the people at the primary had been canvassed by the Democratic County Executive Committee, the result was proclaimed from the Court House door by Chairman Jas. H. Burriss and Mr. Bellamy was declared to be the nominee. It is understood that not all the delegates appointed to represent New Hanover in the Convention were favorable to the action taken by them, but that a caucus was held in the grand jury room shortly before the Convention and that the unit rule was adopted by which it was agreed that a majority should rule.

The Convention was called to order at the hour appointed and Mr. W. J. Davis, formerly of Brunswick, now of New Hanover, was called to the chair. Representatives of the press were requested to act as secretaries. Mr. C. W. Worth, of New Hanover, stated that he had a resolution which he desired to offer and the following was

THE MUTINY APPEAL

Application for Pardon for Adams and Sawyer Has Been Laid Before the President—North Carolina Policyholders Organize.

(Special Star Correspondence.)

Raleigh, N. C., Sept. 22.—The statement was made in the office of the United States Marshal to-day that the necessary papers and petition for pardon or commutation of the death sentence in the cases of Robert Sawyer and Arthur Adams, now in prison at Wilmington, have been laid before President Roosevelt and action by the President is expected very soon. The respite is until November 2nd. Sawyer and Adams are two of the three negroes sentenced by Judge Purnell to be hanged for the mutiny and murder on board the schooner Berwind, Mobile, Ala., to Philadelphia. The captain and five members of the crew were killed. Henry Scott who was convicted and sentenced at the same time has already been hanged and on the scaffold he made a confession which exonerates Sawyer and Adams.

Commissioner of Insurance J. R. Young has issued a call for the two committees appointed by the conference of the policy holders of the Mutual and New York Life Insurance companies at their recent meeting here, to meet in Raleigh Sept. 28th. The committees will take steps to get the data upon which to base a report and recommendations to the meeting of the policy holders to be held here Oct. 16th, during State fair week. Every member of the committee is urged to be present. The committees consist of Governor R. B. Glenn, chairman; J. H. Pou, R. M. Nelson, Col. A. B. Andrews, J. F. Ferrall, G. W. Hinshaw, T. B. Womack, chairman; J. A. McAuley, H. H. McAden, E. J. Justice, H. C. McNair and R. N. Page. The movement is with a view to securing co-operation of the North Carolina policy holders in the general meeting in New York in December for the election of directors of the two insurance companies.

OFFICIAL CANVASS PRIMARY RETURNS

Vote as It Was Cast in Wednesday's and Friday's Contest at the Polls.

THE MEETING YESTERDAY

All Contests Withdrawn, Results are Declared by Democratic County Executive Committee as Previously Published—Several Witnesses.

The New Hanover County Democratic Executive Committee met yesterday morning at the Court House and officially canvassed the returns from the primaries of Wednesday and the second contest on Friday. There were present Chairman Jas. H. Burriss, Secretary W. A. Willson and Messrs. W. H. Shearin, W. F. Carpenter, Gerrit Walker, D. J. Fergus and other members besides a large number of spectators who were present to hear any contest that might be made, especially with reference to the Fourth ward from which irregularities were reported the night before inasmuch as there were found 29 more ballots in the box for sheriff than were cast according to the poll lists kept privately and officially.

The contest was given notice of by Woodus Kellum, Esq., representing Mr. Biddle, the defeated candidate for sheriff in the second primary and he was present to inquire into the matter. William J. Bellamy and Thos. W. Davis, Esqs., were present to represent Mr. Cowan, the successful candidate, to which side Mr. Kellum said he cast no aspersions, merely wanting to get at the bottom of the affair. Capt. A. L. DeRosset, the poll holder in the ward, was the only witness examined. He told of the manner of counting the vote and of the connection each person in the booth had with the counting of the ballots. Upon the conclusion of Capt. DeRosset's statement in regard to the affair, Mr. Bellamy said that the Cowan interests desired to offer no testimony. Mr. Kellum then stated that he would withdraw the challenge of the vote as there was nothing to gain or lose by going into the matter further. Even were the ward thrown entirely out, it would benefit no one as a nomination had been made without that ward.

THE SUPERIOR COURT

One Week Criminal Court for New Hanover Will Begin To-morrow Morning.

EIGHTY-SIX CASES DOCKETED

Shockley Trial Will Begin on Wednesday—Charge Against Young Lonnie Snipes Before Grand Jury—Two Burglary Defendants.

A one-week term of New Hanover Superior Court for the trial of criminal cases only will convene here tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock, Judge E. B. Jones, of Winston, presiding. This will be immediately followed by a two-weeks term of the court for the hearing of civil suits. Solicitor Duffy, who will prosecute the criminal docket, arrived yesterday and has everything in readiness for the opening of the term. There are 86 cases on the docket all told with the probability that this number will be increased as the returns from the magistrates are made at the last moment. Twenty-three of the defendants are in jail and preference will be given, as far as possible, to the trial of these cases for obvious reasons.

The two most important cases that will be called up at the term will be those of M. W. Shockley, charged with killing Frank Tabert, a marble cutter in front of the saloon of the first named about this time last year, and young Lonnie Snipes, charged with the killing of W. L. Williams, in the MacRae street house week before last. It is not thought that the latter case will be more than investigated by the grand jury at this term, but the Shockley case is set peremptorily for trial on Wednesday of this week. It is expected that several days will be required to complete the case as both sides are represented by counsel and every inch of the ground will be contested. Messrs. Bellamy & Bellamy and Herbert McClammy appear for the defendant, while Solicitor Duffy will be assisted by William J. Bellamy, Esq., who has been retained by the wife of the dead man.

In addition to the cases mentioned there are also for trial two burglary charges, the defendants being Caesar Bulluck and Samuel Johnston. Bulluck was one of the negroes implicated in the burglary of Mr. Gore's home some time ago and Johnston is charged with entering the house of the colored butler of Father Dennen on the beach and stealing a watch and other property. Ed. Readis, another negro implicated with Caesar Bullock, died in the jail a week or two ago.

Judge Jones presided at the last term of court here and made a fine impression both personally and in the dispatch of business. It is expected that he will clear the criminal docket in the time alloted for the term. Last week he was engaged in the trial of the docket in Pender Superior Court.

THE LATE COL. W. G. ELLIOTT.

All who knew the late Col. Warren G. Elliott will see a true likness in the following said of him by the venerabe Col. R. B. Creecy in a sketch in the Elizabeth City Economist:

"He was one of Betsy's boys, born in this town and reflected honor upon his navity and became a magnate in the railway world. He was a man of great force of character, of great business capacity, of social magnetism, full of wit, vivacity and humor, warm-hearted and friendly and a prince of good fellows. With such qualities he was bound to take front rank and rise to distinction on the battlefield of life.

"His lineage was a gifted one. His father, the late Gilbert Elliott, of this town, was a leader in the law profession, and was a born logician and but for his untimely death would have been the leading lawyer of North Carolina. His mother, nee Sarah Grice was a leader of society, a cultured woman and an influential member of the Episcopal church, a devout Christian.

"All their family of boys inherited the genius of their parents. Warren became a distinguished lawyer and railroad president. He died lamented by a large circle of friends and leaving an interesting family to lament their loss."

Col. Creecy is 93 years of age and had known Col. Elliott all his life. All who ever met Col. Elliott recognized in him the ability and qualities attributed to him by the venerable editor—the oldest editor in the United States and doubtless in all the world.

NEGROES IN THE NORTH. . .

Booker T. Washington, the colored educator, president of Tuskeegee Institue, Ala., addressed a meeting of negroes in New York on Wednesday night at Mount Olivet Baptist Church, near Fifty-third Street and Seventh Avenue, held under the auspices of the Committee for Improving the Industrial Condition of Negroes in New York. About 800 men and women were present. Dr. William Jay Schieffelin, the philanthropist, presided.

The New York Times says of this address:

"In the course of his address Mr. Washington said that the colored young men and women of this city needed mental and technical training to encourage mental development. Literary training, he said, made them desire better houses and better surroundings in their homes. How could these be obtained, he asked, unless their earning powers were increased? The schools were open in New York, he said, but the manufacturers here were not quite so hospitable to the colored race as they were in the South. He declared that there were more opportunities to spend money in the North and fewer opportunities to earn it than in the South.,

" 'Save your money and cease to have the reputation of being a thriftless, poverty stricken race,' Mr. Washington said. 'Teach your children the dignity of labor, the disgrace of idleness, and how to save money. Begin to be the creators of something and do not be so dependent upon other people. America is the best country I have ever seen, and all those who say it isn't are always glad to get back. I have seen a city in the South with a colored Mayor and negroes owning and operating factories successfully. Why not do it in the North? If Mayor McClellan issued an order that all the colored people were to wear shoes to-morrow made by their own race, the whole lot of you would have to go barefooted. Stand together and begin to create for yourselves and save money and I am sure that there will be a glorious future for you all in the North."

President Washington gives his race good advice. The Northern members of his race do more agitating than those in the South, and it is a good thing for him to open their eyes. Not long ago at the Negro Conference at Washington a Georgia negro made a speech in which he said: "You Northern negroes let us Southern negroes alone and we will be better off." If negroes North and South will follow Booker Washington's advice and quit nursing grievances they will all be better off. He knows what he is talking about.

A RATE-BILL EYE-OPENER.

The Manufacturers' Record under the above heading says: "Cotton-growers of the South, grain-growers of the West and others of the thousands of persons in those parts of the country directly or indirectly interested in through bills of lading from the interior point of shipment to a foreign destination, if they have been able to analyze the ruling of the Interstate Commerce Commission on the question of notice as to changes in export rates, have probably begun to wonder whom their representaeives in Congress represented when they voted for the railroad rate regulation bill."

The same can be said about several other features of the bill. So far the railroads seem to have gotten the best of it.

CURRENT COMMENT.

—Mr. Bryan had a warmer welcome in Columbia than he was given in Charlotte, but, with all the advertisement of his appearance and the elaborate preparation to make it a great occasion, he seems to have had a smaller audience than Ben Tillman had the night he raged against Fraser Lyon.—Charleston Post.

—Mr. Bryan owes it to himself, to his party, and to the American people as a whole that he shall not be led aside from the solid road of practical, present day issues into the bogs and marshes where the fatuous glimmer of will-o-the-wisps tempts the unwary. —As Roosevelt prosperity is again so abroad in the land the cotton farmers are inquiring why cotton is not 15 cents a pound. We would be glad to hear from some of our Republican "prosperity howlers." —More than 40 per cent. of the premium receipts of industrial life insurance companies go to defray management expenses and, according to Louis D. SPIRITS TURPENTINE

—The Postoffice Department has promised Representative Leever, of South Carolina, to inaugurate a regular daily mail service on the Atlantic Coast Line trains between Fayetteville and Columbia, S. C.

—Warrensville special: The store of Sturgill & Pennington, of Sturgill's this county, was burned Tuesday morning. The fire was discovered about 1 o'clock. It is supposed to be the work of an incendiary. The loss is about $5,000. with no insurance.

—The handsome brick building for the hosiery mills at Vaughan, near Littleton is nearing completion. It is a very spacious building and would do credit to any town. Mr. R. S. Spiers is principal owner and manager.

—The building of Asheville's new $200,000 hotel was stopped by the discovery that part of the wall was four inches over adjacent land. The owner of the strip demands an excessive price. The hotel people decided to remove and complete the wall to the true line.

—The Democrats of Onslow county held a big political rally and barbecue on Friday at Jacksonville. There was a very large crowd in attendance, there being big delegations from every part of the county. Hons. Charles R. Thomas, B. F. Dixon, Y. T. Ormond and J. W. Burton were the speakers, the last two being candidates for the Senate. The meeting was a success in every way.

—Senator Simmons delivered a campaign speech in Dunn on Saturday.

—The Republicans of Halifax have nominated a county ticket but it will stand no showing.

—There are eleven capital cases on the docket of the Superior Court of Guilford county. A special term is to be held this week, Judge Long presiding.

—Greensboro special, Sept. 21.—James Johnson, colored, was brought here on a train this afternoon terribly mangled, but alive. A train had run over him at Jamestown, cutting off both legs, one below and one above the knee, and one arm. There is little prospect of his recovery, although he is at the hospital and everything possible for his relief is being done.

—Greensboro special, Sept. 21: Thos McMullen, a traveling salesman for a Detroit brass folding bed company, while on the way to take a train this afternoon, dropped apparently dead on the street. It was found that his whole left side was paralyzed and he was unable to speak or to move. He was taken into a drug store where temporary relief was offered and later was taken to the hospital where he now lies in a critical condition.

—Charlotte Observer: The Greater Charlotte Club has arranged with 35 merchants, bankers and business concerns of the city to have a seal, with "Watch Charlotte Grow" in light green and white, printed on the face of their envelopes. The club will bear the expense of printing the design, which is a very neat one, on the first 2,000 envelopes used by each firm and has placed a cut of the design with every job printer in the city, to be used by any merchants who desire it.

—Raleigh correspondence, Sept. 21: The new annex for women at the State Hospital for the Insane has been completed and furnished and today the inmates began to arrive. In a day or two there will be 50 of these. The building is of the same design as the remainder of the great hospital and contains 10 beds, of which four are for nurses.

—Kinston special, Sept. 21: The diphtheria situation in the city and county is quite serious and the Board of Aldermen are holding a meeting this afternoon to discuss plans for a campaign against it. Two new cases were reported in the city today, one at Mr. M. M. Harpers and one at Mr. H. D. Spain's and it is said that in some parts of the country the disease is very prevalent and in a virulent form.

—Fayetteville Observer: Mr. Hardy West, of Seventy-First, who was in the city yesterday, made such a remarkable statement that it is well worth publishing. He said that though he was 78 years old and had ten children, he had never had occasion to send for a physician in all that time, either for himself or family, until a few days ago, and that then he took the first dose of medicine that ever passed his lips—four calomel tablets. This is certainly a most remarkable record.

—Oxford special, Sept. 21: Mr. Grissom Hicks, who lives near Oxford, in company with Mr. J. T. Murray, had a severe experience with his horse and buggy in high water, when he came near being drowned and lost his pocket book containing $71. Ten days after the accident he took his two boys and walked down the shallow stream about a mile, carefully looking for the pocket book, which he found in the bottom of the stream, the money intact except that it was wet. Six dollar of the money was found hanging to a limb over the stream.

—Raleigh ews and Observer, Sept. 21: J. S. Sutton, a butcher of Edenton, was brought to Raleigh by Sheriff E. S. Norman, of Chowan county, yesterday, and was placed in the Central Hospital for the Insane for treatment. Sutton has made several attempts lpon his own life, the last time shooting himself with a pistol. He had unsuccessfully tried to commit suicide by drowning and poison. Sutton is said to have become insane through grief caused by the death of his second wife, and by financial troubles. There is little belief that Sutton will recover, as his condition is critical, and the physicians say that he will not live more than eight or ten days.

—Enfield special, Sept. 21: For the second time in the past three months the property of Mr. J. B. Dunn has been ravaged by fire. On the morning of July 4th, his residence on Dennis street was completely destroyed, entailing a loss to him of something like two thousand dollars. Again on Friday morning his saw mill, about four miles from Enfield was burned. His loss in this instance is estimated at about five hundred dollars. Mr. Dunn says that the fire was probably occasioned by the door of the furnace being left open and the wind which arose during the night blowing the sparks to the shavings around the mill, thus spreading the flames to the mill sheds. The fire occurred about 3 o'clock in the morning.

—Marion special, Sept. 21: On Tuesday Solicitor Spainhour called attention of the court to the fact that it was impossible for him to proceed in any of the so-called South and Western Railroad cases without an interpreter and the attorneys appearing on either side were waiting to have a disposal of the cases. Judge Cooke said he could not possibly agree to hold the men in jail any longer as they had been there already for four months and were entitled to their liberty or trial. At this point Mr. Spainhour held consultation with the other attorneys and it was agreed to drop the cases, so a nol pros was directed in each case. This included the case against Capt. J. M. Cross, Walter Tuel and John Ledford for homicide and against Jim Mazzoni and Angelo Tespia for conspiracy. Mr. Spainhour directed the sheriff to liberate Mazzoni and Tespia and let them go on their way rejoicing.

—Salisbury special, Sept. 21.—Mayor Boyden and the policemen are making war upon the disreputable disreputable districts. Policeman Torreence this morning arrested one of the women who had been especially vicious and boisterous during the past few days. The mayor has served notice that these women must move on and, unless they obey immediately, they will be arrested and sent to jail as nuisances. Of late these dives have given an unusual amount of trouble and the citizens living within the hearing of the people inhabiting them have asked for deliverance. Rosa Black, one of the worst, was taken Wednesday night and yesterday failed to appear after giving bond. She was run out of town.

A theme of interest to a large number is the W. L. I. Bazaar, which will be held early in October. A very large number of ladies are interesting themselves in the matter and the bazaar promises to be one of the leading society events of the month. Several very unique features will be introduced and those who are the leading spirits of the entertainment are anticipating and promising much pleasure. The details are not all completed but an unusual programme of pleasure is sure to be the outcome of the best thoughts and efforts of the ladies who have kindly undertaken to help the soldier boys.

A very quiet home wedding which will be a source of pleasure to many will be the marriage of Miss Betty Washington Johnson and Mr. William Walter Love, to be performed on the seventeenth of October. Miss Johnson is very popular with her friends, and is one of the city's most charming young ladies, while the groom is a young gentleman whose acquaintances are pleased to be numbered as his friends. He is a man of fine business qualification and is secretary and treasurer of one of the wealthiest incorporated company's of this city. The couple is receiving congratulations and best wishes for a happy and long married life.

An incident of the storm last Monday which serves to disprove the saying that "the society girl is only frivolous" was the bailing of an over loaded surf boat which had gone to the rescue of the women and children on the beach. The frail craft was overloaded and was being tossed about on the raging billows, when it was found necessary to bail the boat to keep it afloat. With great presence of mind and steady hand, born of courage and bravery, several young women prominent in society, pulled off their shoes and with them steadily bailed the water out of the boat which prevented it from filling and kept it afloat. There are no braver women in the world than the Wilmington girls.

Quite a number of the pretty and sweet girls of this city who constitutes Wilmington's colony of school girls have gone to resume their studies at various institutions of learning. A partial list of those who have gone or who soon are to leave are:

St. Marys—Misses Wilhelmina Harlow, Bessie Watters, Marguerite Short Helen Strange, Sue Prince, Liza Morton and Page Shelburne.

Normal—Misses Annette Munds, Mellie Cotchett, Annie Hill Holmes, and Mary Baldwin Mitchell.

Greensboro Female College—Miss Mildred Maunder.

Hollins Institute—Misses Belle Heyer, Bessie Albright, Helen Kenley, Lillian Kenly, and Mildred Smith.

Miss Stuarts—Misses Marguerite Holladay, Agnes McQueen, Virginia Bailey, Isabel Smallbones, Christine Stevenson, and Fannie Murchison.

Converse College—Annie Worth, Elizabeth McKoy and Olive Quince.

Madame Le Fevre—Misses Florence Kidder and Bessie Bridgers.

Peabody Conservatory of Music—Miss Lina DeRosset.

When sweet, pretty, and attractive young ladies are the candidates for honors, it is a very difficult proposition for the average man to decide whom to cast his vote for. A voting contest for the "most popular young lady" has been going on at Bryant's for some time and the friends of quite a number of young ladies have been very zealous and loyal in the advocacy of the charmer whose candidacy they have espoused. In addition to the "honor", the one receiving the largest vote, by October third, will be presented with a handsome gold bracelet as a souvenir of the contest. When the presentation is made Mr. Bryant will give a reception, to which invitations will be issued, and it is proposed to make the reception one of the social events of the month. The young ladies who are being voted for are, Miss Irene King, Miss Alice Fishblate, Miss Daisy Burbank, Miss Maud Bulluck, Miss Olivia Horne, Miss Hattie French, Miss Julia McLaurin, Miss Jennie Crane, Miss Janie Culbreth, Miss May McDougal, Miss Eula Galloway, and Miss Genivive Dushan.

A half tone picture of Miss Sadie Jones, recently taken by Davis & Eickemeyer, which by the way is not at all flattering, was printed in last Sunday's issue of the New York Times which says:

"Miss Sadie Jones is the only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Pembroke Jones of North Carolina, New York, and Newport and a granddaughter of James Green, famous in Texas and for whom a county there was named. The Joneses have a large plantation near Wilmington, N. C., called Airlie, and here they entertain house parties during the Lenten season, when their guests come from New York. During the holidays, however, their guests are chiefly Southerners.

Last year at the last holiday season they gave a large ball for their neighbors and friends in honor of Miss Jones, who made her formal debut last Winter.

Miss Jones is a rather tall young girl with brown hair, large blue eyes, and a remarkably sweet and innocent expression, and always dresses very girlishly and simply. She cares little for society, but is fond of outdoor life, especially riding, and when on the Southern plantation spends most of her time on horseback accompanied by her pet dogs. She is quiet and unaffected in her manners and is as popular among the girls as among the men."

Our former townspeople, the Shotters, are entertaining very lavishly a Shadow Brook, near Lennox, and the following account is given of a breakfast given last Saturday morning

Spencer P. Shotter of Savannah, who bought Shadowbrook, the largest country house in Lenox, last Fall, entertained the Lenox cottagers and the Berkshire Hunt at breakfast today, following a run of the Hunt in the Richmond Valley. There were twenty riders in the run, and the kill at Loveland's Corners was witnessed by a big company of Lenox cottagers, who drove over the mountain for the event. Among those who rode was Miss Isabel Shotter, whose mount was her magnificent hunter which won the President's cup in the Hunt Races.

Shadowbrook was attractively decorated. Throughout the big house quantities of Spanish moss was used in contrast to red Autumn foliage. Cotton balls from the cotton fields were in abundance as table and mantel decorations, and cunningly arranged for effect were pomegranates, melons, and Southern grapes, all from Mr. Shotter's Georgia estate. The menu was typical of the South, and included terrapin stew, fried chicken with bell peppers, stuffed ricebirds, cold meats, grapes, and ices. The ices were served in a novel favor, representing a cotton bale, designed by Miss Isabel Rountree, Mr. Shotter's niece.

Following the hunt breakfast there was dancing in the big music room."

No matter how strong the digestion may be naturally, it is no very difficult matter to weaken it, and, no matter how feeble it may be, it is always possible to do something to strengthen it, declares an exchange. The subject is, therefore, worth some consideration and of interest to every one, the eupeptic and the dyspeptic alike, for, if there is one thing more certain than another, it is that a vast amount of comfort and the discomfort of life depends upon the prosaic act of digestion.

A good digestion resembles many of the other blessings of life in this—it is seldom really valued until it is lost.

When people have for years adopted the foolish practice of bolting their food, without taking any trouble as to its proper mastication, they can hardly wonder that a new condition of things arises which cannot be cured in a few weeks. If you subject your stomach to a long course of illusage, you can but expect that it will resent such treatment, and not be easily mollified. If we treat our acquaintances badly, we quickly turn them into enemies, and if our illtreatment is long continued they become implacable, and it may be possible even by the best of treatment, to regain their friendship. It is much the same with the digestive apparatus. If we wish to be in its good graces we must treat it with consideration.

We must not expect it to do work it was never meant to do. The stomach is not provided with teeth; but it is provided, and so are the intestines, with certain juices, whose action converts food into a condition in which it will nourish and repair the tissues and renovate the blood and increase its quantity; but—an important but—in order to do this the food when it reaches the stomach must be in a "get-at-able state," it must, be in a soft, pulpy condition, so that the digestive juices can have a chance of reaching it. This they cannot do properly if such things as meat, for instance, are swallowed in lumps.

For this reason those whose teeth are defective will find artificial teeth an immense help—indeed, a very important factor—in the prevention of dyspepsia. It is hardly necessary to say that they must fit properly, so that mastication can be comfortably performed. Worry at meal times and hurry directly after are two potent factors in weakening the digestion.

An old physiologist, writing seventy years ago, said some words which are as true today as they were then. "Laughter," he said, "is one of the greatest helps to digestion with which I am acquainted, and the custom prevalent among our forefathers of exciting it at table by jesters and buffoons was founded upon true medical principles. In a word, endeavor to have cheerful and merry companions at your meals; what nourishment you take then will certainly produce good and light blood."

TYNER'S DYSPEPSIA REMEDY.

Many Have Dyspepsia and Don't Know It.

Do you belch up wind? Taste your food after eating See specks before your eyes? Are you pale and haggard? Does your heart flutter? Are you dizzy? Do you have pains in side or back? INTRODUCED BRYAN

Maj. Chas. M. Stedman's Eloquent Tribute Presenting Nebraskan at Greensboro.

THE MAN OF THE MOMENT

The Only One to Lead Democracy In It's Fight Against Corporate Greed and Unlawful Combinations.

North Carolinians, Ladies and Gentlemen:

No student of history has failed to observe that, in all ages, in every land, whose people have been subjected to tyranny in any of its diverse forms, there have been periods of unrest, manifested at different times by threatened or actual revolt against existing conditions. During the present era when civilization is far advanced and education more generally discussed amongst all classes than at any time heretofore, this spirit of unrest has been developed to a marked degree and nowhere to a greater extent than amongst the people of our own country. It is as a rule, born of the desire, which all possess who love liberty, to enjoy the blessings which belong to man as of natural right. No form of tryanny is more brutal than that of plutocracy—none more degrading—none more repulsive to free men. It is against the exactions and the wrongs, which ever accompany government, which has for its basis the power of money, wrung from the citizen of unequal laws, that the people of this country have declared war, which will not end until they have utterly overthrown and destroyed the criminal trusts whence originate the crimes which threaten the very existence of a constitutional form of government as intended by our fathers. When they founded this Republic and framed its institutions they builded strongly and well. The star of hope rose clear and high, and its light was spread throughout the world. Not mighty armies nor vast fleets can shake the foundation of the structure erected by their wisdom and cemented by their blood. Whether their dreams of its greatness shall be forever dispelled and the last hope of the world for a free and enduring Republic shall be shattered by the vices and crimes begotten by the vast accumulation of wealth in the hands of a few, obtained by unjust and corrupt legislaton, and which places grievous burdens upon the great mass of the people is the question to be decided by the Presidential contest in 1908. Whether this country shall be governed in accordance with the will of its peope untrammeled by the power of money or whether it shall be finally surrendered to the Cossacks of greed, self-styled kings of finance, who control the trusts, the one issue above all others to be decided in the conflict. It matters not what others may do, but by God's help the people of North Carolina will stand by the land of their fathers in its integrity with unflinching spirits and resolute hearts. The supreme crisis has arrived. The hour has come when the truth should be known by all men and no man should be ashamed to proclaim it to the world. The criminal agents of over-capitalized trusts have nominated and elected Governors, corrupted judges, and debauched Legislatures with money extorted from the toil of a struggling people.

The Man and the Moment.

There are junctures in the affairs of men when what is needed is a man—not treeasures, not fleets, not legions but a man—the man of the moment, the man of the occasion, the man of destiny, whose spirit attracts and unites and inspires, whose capacity is congeniel to the crisis, whose powers are equal to the convulsion, the child and outcome of the storm.

All men recognize in him whom I shall present to you tonight a man of Fate given to our Republic in the hour of its peril. Why this vast audience here tonight? When his coming is heralded, why does the ploughman leave his furrow unfinished in the field, the merchant his desk, the lawyer his office, all classes of men their vocations? Why are hamlets and villages and towns deserted that their entire population may greet him and bid him God speed in his great work? Is it his attractive personality which charms and delights all who approach him? No, not that. Is it his superb and matchless oratory which captures the heart, enthralls the mind and leads men captive at his will? No, not that. Is it his rare unselfishness and self-abnegation which prefers the triumph of right rather than high office and great emoluments for himself? No, not that. It is the fact of his destiny, instinctively recognized the conviction that he is a messenger of Truth who will guide the people of this Republic to a decisive triumph in their contest with the arrogance and the insolence of the money powre of the Trusts arrayed against them. He has carried the National Democratic banner before, when it was entrusted to his keeping, splendidly and gloriously and victory was snatched from his grasp only by the unscrupulous and corrupt use of money. He returned it to those who gave it to him with no stain or blemish upon its gorgeous folds and his hands were clean as the driven snow. He will carry it again to a great and lasting triumph.

Fearless Enemy of the Trusts.

Under the flag of the Republican party are arrayed the masters of the Trusts and all those whom they can control. Even now their affrighted legions are in full retreat and their leaders in the plenitude of their terror under the white flag of truce and in the guise of friends (God save the mark) are shouting to the advancing army of democracy, what a dangerous and sad mistake it is to follow the flag of William Jennings Bryan. For their answer let them listen to the thunder from every Democratic State convention, north, east, South, and west, as its echoes reverberate throughout the land, and the command is forward all along the lines, and the battle cry of the Democratic hosts rings clearer, and stronger and louder, as they see the white plume of their great leader far to the front in the advancing storm of battle. When the contest is over—the conflict ended and the victory won, there shall be gathered together in the Capital of the nation such a concourse as was never before seen within its limits. Men from Louisiana and men from Maine, men from Nebraska and men from North Carolina—from every portion of this great Republic shall they come and together celebrate with joy and gratitude the mighty triumph. And when the vast procession shall take up its march to pass in review, upon the grand stand will be seen William Jennings Bryan, crowned with the laurels of love and affection bestowed by his grateful countrymen, recognized by all as the ablest, the most uncompromising and most unselfish opponent of the corrupt moneyed power of this country and the unrivaled defender of the rights of humanity.

I have now the great honor and pleasure to present to you Hon. William Jennings Bryan. The State of Nebraska claims him, but he belongs not to her alone, nor to our common country exclusively. His name and his renown are the imperishable property of the civilized world—of every people in every land where liberty dwells and freedom has a home.

Example: Abundant hair plus dandruff microbes, plus a few years, equals baldness.

Baldness Begins Early

"Baldness begins in the young and increases whether rapidly or slowly, up to the fiftieth year." So says Dr. Sabouraud, of Paris, the world's greatest authority upon diseases of the hair and scalp

Dr. Sabouraud confirms Dr. Unna's discovery that baldness is a contagious disease caused by a microbe. Ask your family physician about these two authorities.

Dr. Sabouraud goes further, however, and says that "Baldness as a chronic malady, is a disease not of old age, but of youth; in bald old men we simply see the result of a disease that has been slowly doing its work for many years."

The dandruff microbe is an invisible growth of vegetable character; minute fragments of it are easily passed from one head to the other, through the medium of public hair brushes, towels, etc.

In the hair these fragments are inert until they come in contact with the natural hair oil from the sebaceous glands of the scalp, when they begin to grow and form one colony after another; in a similar manner, dry fragments of yeast cake are inert until they find the proper medium, when they promptly begin to "work."

On the back of the head most of these fragments of microbic growth fall out of the hair before they find permanent lodgement in the sebacious glands and this is one of the reasons why baldness begins, and is often confined to the top of the head.

It often takes years to produce dandruff, but after it is well established in the scalp the destruction becomes more and more rapid. The hair becomes dull, brittle and lustreless, but occasionally there is excessive oiliness. Itching of the scalp and falling hair usually follow excessive dandruff, and unless something is done to check the disease, baldness will surely follow.

NEWBRO'S HERPICIDE—the ORIGINAL remedy that "kills the dandruff germ"—will overcome any stage of this malady, except chronic baldness. It acts by destroying the growth that causes the disease, and when this is done, the hair is bound to grow as nature intended.

More men and women get positive results from the use of NEWBRO'S HERPICIDE than from all other hair remedies combined.

It is delightfully refreshing to use, and it stops itching of the scalp almost instantly. Remember that you must destroy the cause to remove the effect. Do not wait for chronic baldness, for it is incurable. THE TIME TO SAVE YOUR HAIR IS WHILE YOU HAVE HAIR TO SAVE.

THE BREATH OF LIFE

It is a significant fact that the strongest animal of its size, the gorilla also has the largest lungs. Powerful lungs mean powerful creatures. How to keep the breathing organs right should be man's chiefest study. Like thousands of others, Mrs. Ora A. Stephens, of Port Williams O., has learned how to do this. She writes: "Three bottles of Dr. King's New Discovery stopped my cough of two years and cured me of what my friends thought consumption. O, it's grand for throat and lung troubles." Guaranteed by all druggist.

PROF. McKANNA COMING.

Proprietor of Famous Three-Day Liquor Cure to Demonstrate Here.

Dr. J. J. McKanna, president of the famous three-day liquor cure, of Reidsville, N. C., which has been widely advertised in this State, will be at The Orton, in this city, Monday night for the purpose of making some demonstrations with his celebrated cure. Mayor Waddell and Chief of Police Williams have been requested by Dr. McKanna to select three or four of the most confirmed cases of drunkenness coming under their observation in the courts of the city and they will be given the treatment absolutely free of charge. This will be to demonstrate merely that they can be cured of the habit in three days as advertised, without hypodermics, detention from business and without any bad after-effects. Similar demonstrations were recently made with much success in Raleigh, Charlotte, Greensboro and cities in South Carolina.

Mayor Waddell or Chief Williams would be glad of the names of any patients who may desire to avail themselves of this opportunity for the treatment without cost. Pastors of churches or benevolent institutions could well afford to furnish names of persons in need of reclamation from the liquor evil.

CITY SCHOOL TO-MOROW WEEK

Superintendent Blair Will Arrive Soon —Notice to Patrons.

The public schools of the city will open to-morrow week. Monday, October 1st., as previously announced. A letter from Mr. Blair says that he will be here early this week to arrange for the opening and that he hopes to have the largest attendance of any schools in the State.

The High School examinations for new pupils and those who have been conditioned on any subject will be held in the Tileston building on Thursday and Friday, Sept. 27th and 28th., beginning at 10 o'clock.

All new pupils for the grammar schools who live north of Market street, will report to the Hemenway building for classification on Friday, Sept. 28th., at 10 o'clock.

New pupils for the grammar schools, who live south of Market street, will report to the Union building for classification on the same day and hour above named.

It is highly important that all pupils in the city who expect to attend school, will report for duty the first day.

DR. W. C. GALLOWAY TO LEAVE

Will Give Up Extensive Specialty Work to Engage in Farming.

It will be a source of sincere regret for the many friends of Dr. W. C. Galloway in this city to know that on or about the first of the coming month he and his estimable family will move from Wilmington to "Heartsease," in Edgecombe county, six miles from Tarboro, where Dr. Galloway will take charge of the large farming intterests of Mrs. Galloway in that peculiarly favored section. Dr. Galloway decided some time ago to retire from active practice at which he has been constantly engaged for a number of years and in which he has been signally successful. He will be succeeded in his practice here by Dr. H. O. Hyatt, of Goldsboro, a specialist in the same lines of Dr. Galloway, whose office and practice he has bought. Dr. Hyatt and family will move to Wilmington the last of the present month.

Pimples call for immediate treatment. There's nothing more offensive and dreaded than a pretty face covered with eruptions. The body must be kept perfectly healthy with Hollister's Rocky Mountain Tea. Tea or Tablets. 35 cents. J. Hicks Bunting Drug Company.

"Whereas the County Convention of New Hanover county, the highest political authority of the Democratic party in the county, duly constituted and assembled, and called for the purpose of appointing delegates to the several conventions, State Judicial, Congressional and Senatorial, by unanimous vote decided that such appointed delegates should go to such conventions without instructions, and whereas the Democratic Executive Committee in its call for a primary election for New Hanover county under the 'primary law' did not call for a submission to the said primary of the choice for a State Senator for this district, (of which this county is only a part), and whereas the said committee was called together during the absence of the chairman, and after advertisement of the first call, and decided to submit the question of a Senatorial choice to the people of New Hanover at the primaries and whereas no such primary was held in Brunswick county. Now be it resolved, that the vote of the primaries constitutes instructions and that we, as delegates appointed under the unanimous vote of the county convention to attend this convention without instruction, can not square our duty to the county convention and to the wish of the people as expressed at the primaries, and we do therefore consider ourselves relieved of our responsibility, and we also hereby wish to declare, as representatives of New Hanover county, that in the future we will not consider New Hanover county bound to observe the tacitly understood arrangement where by the two counties of New Hanover and Brunswick should alternate in the choice of a candidate to the State Senate."

The resolution was seconded by Mr. Martin S. Willard, of New Hanover. George L. Peschau, Esq., of Brunswick, rose to the point of order that the convention had not been organized so far as he was able to ascertain and no action had been taken to see that the counties were properly represented. The motion of Mr. Worth was then temporarily withdrawn and the chairman requested Capt. W. P. Oldham and Mr. J. Dillard Bellamy to investigate the representation of the counties and make report to the chairman. They reported that both counties were represented.

Mr. Worth then renewed his resolution and it was again seconded by Mr. Martin S. Willard. Mr. Peschau in a vigorous speech, opposed the resolution on the ground that it cut off the very purpose for which the convention had been called by the people of the two counties. Under the Democratic plan of organization the two delegations met jointly for the purpose of ratifying the action of the several conventions or primaries of the counties of New Hanover and Brunswick; that while the action of the delegates from New Hanover, after an expression of the people at the primaries two days before, might be considered a mere formality, this being Brunswick's time to name the candidate according to the time-honored custom, the New Hanover delegation should at least hear the choice of Brunswick and should carry out the action of the people as expressed in the primaries; that the action of the New Hanover delegation, if the resolution should carry, appeared to be an effort to shirk a responsibility; that Brunswick had stood solidly to New Hanover when she needed her and that she should not be cast off at this last moment, perchance because New Hanover was stronger numerically.

As Mr. Peschau was about to place the name of Brunswick's choice before the Convention, Mr. Willard rose to a point of order, stating that the resolutions were before the house and no nominations had been called for to which Mr. Peschau rather heatedly replied that if the resolutions were passed, so far as New Hanover was concerned, no nomination or ratification could be made; that it was the evident purpose of the New Hanover delegation in its might to pass the resolution and withdraw; that in consequence thereof, in addressing himself to the motion, he could not be out of order to say that Brunswick county had a candidate, who had been unanimously endorsed in her convention and for whom the delegates were instructed, and that the name of that candidate was the Hon. George H. Bellamy, familiarly known in his own bailiwick as the "Duke of Brunswick" and more recently designated at the late Fayetteville Congressional Convention as the "Gentleman From North Carolina;" the same who had received here in New Hanover county two days before 1,736 votes out of 1,736 votes cast for the office to which he aspires. Mr. Peschau went on to say that to vote intelligently upon the resolutions, the purposes of the meeting ought to be understood; that it was for the purpose of selecting or ratifying a nomination for the Senate; that the pretext that the primaries of New Hanover county had already decided the matter so far as New Hanover is concerned, ought not and should not prevent or keep the convention from performing its duties, namely the carrying out of the will of the people of the two counties as had been customary for years past.

Mr. Willard said that he didn't have time to repudiate some of the things Mr. Peschau had said and called for the previous question. The chairman ordered a roll call and through Mr. Peschau, chairman of the delegation, Brunswick voted solidly 13 against the resolution and asked to explain the vote, which he did, saying that first it was against all precedent and appeared to be due to a manifest intention to be discourteous to Brunswick; second, that the vote was a protest against the inference that the resolutions seemed to carry that the method of holding conventions in Brunswick for the selection of candidates is irregular; third, that New Hanover was attempting by reason of her numerical strength to prevent Brunswick from carrying out the instructions and intentions of her nominating convention.

New Hanover was then called and voted solidly 26 for the resolution, and the chair declared it carried. Mr. Willard then arose and stated that by reason of the passage of the resolution and the action of the primaries further complicating matters, there was nothing further for the uninstructed delegation to do but to adjourn. Mr. R. A. Parsley seconded the motion to adjourn. Mr. Peschau requested that the motion to adjourn be withdrawn until the call for the convention could be read, which expressly stated that the object of the convention was to make a nomination of Senator to represent the counties of New Hanover and Brunswick. He asked that in the interest of fair play the call be read and the question debated. Mr. Willard declined to withdraw the motion and Brunswick voted solidly 13 no and New Hanover solidly 26 yes. The delegates appointed to represent New Hanover then withdrew in a body and the Brunswick delegation remained in the court room. Mr. Peschau stated that the delegation had been unable to perform the duty to which it had been called and upon motion Howard C. Curtis, Esq., of Southport, was called to the chair and Mr. John E. Douglass was requested to act as secretary. Resolutions were passed deploring the action of the New Hanover delegation. Mr. George H. Bellamy was then placed in nomination for Senator from the Eleventh district and was declared to be the regular nominee of the party for the Democracy of New Hanover and Brunswick, the New Hanover delegation having withdrawn from the hall before carrying out the purposes for which the convention was called. The chairman and secretary were instructed to notify the proper authorities of New Hanover county of the convention and subsequently Chairman Burriss, of the Democratic Executive Committee of New Hanover, declared Mr. Bellamy the recognized Democratic nominee of the two counties.

Senator Bellamy was in the city yesterday but did not attend the convention. He says that he is perfectly satisfied with the turn of affairs; that he prefers the nomination by 1,736 sovereign voters of the county to any nomination that could be given him by a small coterie of men representing a single interest. He is very much gratified and will be elected if life shall last until the 6th day of next November.

Brunswick was represented in the convention by Mr. Peschau, Mr. Curtis, Messrs. J. D. Robbins, Preston McKeithan, J. C. Nelson, Isaac Skipper, J. E. Douglass, V. Elvington, David Mercer, Will Nelson and J. Dillard Bellamy.

The names of the New Hanover delegation have previously been published and nearly all of them were present at the convention.

between the poll lists and the vote in the First ward and at Delgado was not taken up at all. Mr. Kellum stated that he had examined the First ward books and found them apparently in proper form.

The spectators were present largely to note the action of the Executive Committee in its probable effect upon a large number of wagers that are alleged to have been made on Cowan's majority, a favorite estimate on the day of election having been 300. The Executive Committee decided to declare the vote exactly as it had been returned and as was given in this paper yesterday morning and the day after the first primary. According to law Chairman Burriss, of the Committee, proclaimed the result at the Court House door, including all officers that were voted for.

The only other business transacted by the Committee yesterday was the examination and approval of a large number of bills for the expenses of the primaries, which cost all told in the neighborhood of $700. The candidates pay the expense of the primary and collections have previously been made.

Cake Mixer and Beater.

Mr. Richard F. Warren has just had installed at his steam bakery, No. 22 North Front street, a machine that is quite new and novel in Wilmington and greatly increases the facilities for handling the trade at this popular establishment. It is a cake mixer and beater and is manufactured by the firm of J. H. Day & Co., of Cincinnati, being the same as is in use in the large up-to-date cracker and cake establishments of the North. It will mix and beat from 40 to 60 pounds of constituents every ten minutes and does away altogether with beating by hand, giving a much finer and lighter quality of dough and in any quantities that the trade may demand on short notice. The machine is already in operation and is one of the wonders at the bakery of Mr. Warren. The beater is run by an electric motor.

THE W. L. I. BAZAAR.

Various Features Are Arranged—Daughters of Confederacy.

At a recent meeting of the Central Committee of Arrangements for the W. L. I. Bazaar on Oct. 9th., 10th. and 11th., it was decided to have the opening night on Tuesday devoted to military features with elaborate fancy or Zouave drills by the company with the quarterly medal contest for the best drilled soldier. Wednesday night there will be an elaborate musical programme and fancy dances. Thursday night will be "Veterans' Night" when it is hoped that all the old soldiers will turn out in the gray and give some exhibition of the tactics in '61 and '65. Friday night the crowning of the Queen will take place with elaborate ceremonies.

The shooting gallery has been arranged for and handsome prizes will be offered for the best shots. Arrangements are being made for brilliant spectacular effects and it is proposed to make of the festival an elaborate one in every particular.

The Daughters of the Confederacy will issue a call for a meeting Tuesday and committees will be appointed by the ladies to have in charge the various details of their work in connection with the bazaar.

Educational Addresses in Columbia.

Hon. J. Y. Joyner, State Superintendent of Public Instruction, has five appointments to deliver addresses at educational rallies in Columbus county this week. He will be at Wayman Church, Ransom township, Tuesday at 11 A. M., and at Livington Chapel the same night. On Thursday he will be at Mt. Zion church, Welch's Creek, at 11 A. M. and at Chadbourn that night. On Friday at 11 o'clock, Mr. Joyner will speak at Iron Hill, Williams township. At Mt. Zion church Thursday the people are arranging for a big gathering. It is about eight miles from Whiteville, the county seat, five miles from Clarkton and two miles from Elkton, from either of which points the speaking may be reached easily. A big basket picnic will be a feature of the day and the public is cordially invited.

Big Sale This Week at Gaylord's.

Attention is called to the large advertisement of Mr. George O. Gaylord, which will be found on another page of to-day's Star. The sale starts Thursday and lasts nine days. The store will be closed all day Wednesday in order to mark down the stock and prices will be no object as soon as the doors are open on the following morning. The Charles Blomme stock was recently purchased by Mr. Gaylord at a great sacrifice and this will form the basis of the great sale at this popular establishment during the nine days. Extra help has been secured to wait on the trade and a great rush is expected. In the advertisement elsewhere in to-day's paper will be found items and prices that will interest the discriminating buyer.

SHIPWRECK HORRORS CONTINUE

Two Half Starved Sailors Tken from Raft at Sea.

(By Wire to The Morning Star.)

Norfolk, September 22.—From Monday morning at 8 o'clock until Thursday evening following, but for the three small fishes which were cast up by the sea upon the bit of wreckage on which they rode, and were divided and devoured raw, John Koerber and Karnston Berntsen, seamen aboard the late three masted schooner Nelson E. Newbury, of New York, Captain Bernard, rode a raft on the sea, off this coast alternating between faint hope and deep dispaair, until the steamer Egda came along and saved them.

The men, who were landed here this morning by Captain Thomas Olsen, are absolutely destitute. They were turned over to United States immigration inspector Morton, who having no authority to furnish the men with food nor send them to new York where they wish to go, sought Rev. J. B. Merritt, of the Seamens Friend Society, with a view to getting him to raise money for heir needs.

One of North Carolina's historic homes is shown in the above illustration. A half century ago, and throughout the memorable period of the great civil war, it was the residence of the late Ex-Governor Morehead. Today, it is one of Greensboro's most beautiful spots and interest still attaches to the place as the present home of the Keeley Institute.

Here nature assists science in a great work: that of reclaiming men and women from the influence of strong drink and drugs. The place is an ideal one for this work. Five minutes walk from the postoffice, on West Washington Street—a great grove of oak trees, lawns and flowers, covering in all an entire city block, a massive old residence, with a handsome new annex, thoroughly up-to-date in point of conveniences—porches, parlors, club rooms, dining hall, excellent food, good beds, modern baths, splendid water, books, music, games and amusements to suit every taste: all these are provided to minimize the depression following the excessive use of stimulants while the scientific rebuilding of the nervous system is in progress. These surroundings and conveniences also make this an ideal place for the treatment of neurasthenia, where the nerves are suffering from the strain of overwork or mental depression.

The Keeley treatment is not an experiment. It has been an established fact for over a quarter century. During this time many imitations and so called cures have sprung up and died the death of their kind. Today the Greensboro Institute is the largest branch home for the Keeley treatment in the United States. Here treatment for the liquor and drug addictions, the tobacco habit and nerve exhaustion has been in steady progress for fifteen years and thousands of rehabilitated homes testify to the good work it has done.

THE row of sunflowers that Rosamond planted along by the low bamboo fence became, in time, a conspicuous feature of the Seamen's Retreat, as Mrs. Helmsby's bungalow was called. It had come to pass that as the plants grew and waxed strongly individual, after nature's plan, several of them acquired the names of sundry officers of the U. S. S. — that had been lying so long in the harbor of Yokohama. Once suggested, the idea took tremendously and had the usual number of claimants after the fact, each of whom warmly maintained that it bore the irrefutable marks of his own seething imagination, adding bitterly that it was no surprise to him, however, to see men of meaner mold clutch at everything in sight. At any rate, toward the end of May the resemblances were pronounced little short of uncanny. Any one could pick out at a glance the tiny, gossipy "Chief," who had a neuralgic crick in his neck when the southwest monsoon set in, and equally the "Navigator." Who save T. Pendleton Semmes had so aggressively prosperous an air—always a trifle straighter, greener and yellower than any of the others, as became the one rich bachelor in the squadron? And farther to the left the "Doctor," with leaves growing high for those broad shoulders so given to carrying other people's burdens, and head bent to listen to the voice of children. The "Senior Ensign" was christened by himself, referring to that tendency to baldness on the top of the yellow disk, so pitiful in sight of his rank and pay. And then—spoken of only in whispers—there was the pompous, short legged, big headed "Captain" next to the pink azaleas.

A great deal of buffoonery, pure and simple, went on in this corner of the compound—notably that day when the doctor dared Mrs. Helmsby to introduce the captain to his vegetable replica. She did it too, and he laughed immoderately and stayed on to dinner, to the entire rout and confusion of the breathless witnesses peeping out of the dining room windows.

So that afternoon when Shiro answered the doorbell and declared, "Miss'es no have got—no, nor little missy nor any kind have got," the three officers strolled naturally across the lawn to inspect the sunflowers and smoke a consoling cigarette before deciding what to do with the rest of the day. As they stood there the front door of the house opened, and Mrs. Helmsby sailed serenely out, buttoning her gloves vigorously, unconscious of her audience. Dr. Mae coughed with sternness, and she turned quickly. She went toward them, laughing, without a redeeming touch of confusion on her mischievous face.

"I, for one, wouldn't have believed it," said the doctor to the navigator, who lent himself begrudgingly to all this nonsense.

"Teaching the heathen a new Christian thing in taradiddles," added Ensign Ackley gloomily.

"You know, every one of you, that I'm not at home today!" scolded Mrs. Helmsby. The doctor clasped his hands and appealed to high heaven.

"The ladies' committee about the ball to the English admiral meets in fifteen minutes, and I promised to lead off the American revolt. There's always an international row, you know. This time it's this: You see, our admiral comes next week, and I suppose you think they gushingly offered to postpone it. Well, they didn't. Now, that dance is going to be put off, or not one copper cash shall they get from the Americans, and a cheaper nor hungrier affair than it will prove—oh, I do enjoy it so!" she ended in a sort of dreamy ecstasy. The men shouted.

"What shall we do now? Can't you think of anything, Mrs. Helmsby?" appealed Mr. Semmes as they all followed her to the gate.

"The Settlement ladies receive today. Go the rounds," she ordered.

"But we don't like their cake," whined the doctor as he drooped his twinkling boyish eyes suggestively.

"Well, if there is any," she laughed yieldingly. She clapped her hands, and Shiro ran out at the summons. A question, an answer, and the verdict was, "Not a crumb!" Mae and Ackley languished upon each other's shoulders.

"I promise not to harbor it up if you'll let me stay and hang on the piano. May I?" asked the latter.

"Of course, child," answered Mrs. Helmsby, who was a year and a half older than the ensign. "But G clef has had nervous prostration ever since the Virginia reel night, so please try and remember either to jump it or pull it up each time," she called after him.

"'By the bye, is your sister out for the whole afternoon?" asked Mr. Semmes offhand as he walked up the Bluff road with Mrs. Helmsby.

"Dear knows! She started with the boys and amah."

"Which way, may I ask?"

"Benten-dori, photographs, I think."

"I believe I'll walk down that way," he suggested, watching her face. Both voices were lifeless from apparent lack of interest.

"Do. None of you gets enough exercise. I write Guy every mail—oh, how do you do? It's Mrs. Ammon, and I want to corrupt her before she goes into the courtroom. Goodby, Mr. Semmes."

And Mrs. Helmsby sprang into a passing phaeton that had stopped for her.

Bert Ackley was astride of the piano stool, pounding out a fervent thing of his own in five flats, before the others were fairly out of hearing, and ten minutes later another listener entered in her quiet way and stood behind him. After putting up her lorgnette for an instant she leaned against the door frame restfully. An incorrigible flirt, the cause of plots and counterplots, sleepless nights, barefaced falsities on sea and land, smoldering silences in the wardroom, active hatreds in the steerage—Rosamond Ackley, the belle of the squadron, a study in gray and white that afternoon, her heavy, sweet, passionate face framed by a big soft brimmed hat that wandered about it like a Florentine scroll.

Jane Helmsby had spent much deep study upon her sister, to whom she had been a mother for many years, and the result made her laugh to herself. The modern girl, with her brawn and freckles, her slang and chaff, her tailor made everything, was no match for her sweet, quaintly gentle Rosamond, upon whose shoulders men draped so easily their fluttering ideals. The old fashioned name was what first put the idea into Jane's head, realizing at the same time that she herself formed without effort an extremely effective background.

The girl—who, by the way, was no relation to the ensign bearing the same name, though it was not for lack of ardent investigation on his part—had not stood leaning there two minutes when Ackley suddenly looked around, exclaiming:

"I felt you were there!" His face grew white, as it always did upon first getting sight of her. He went to her—all the way, for she made no movement—and took her hand, saying gravely, "I'm so glad!" She withdrew it so gently that the action had all the value of another woman's giving.

"You are centuries late," said the wily ensign. If Semmes could have heard that as he peered into shop after shop down in Jap town!

Rosamond took off her hat and smoothed her dark hair with both hands. She always wore it as the low browed happily may—parted in the middle and drawn back, sometimes knotted low, sometimes high, according to her well pondered costume and Jane's dictate. Today it was low and loose, and her simple action seemed to Ackley full of a beautiful mystery.

"I'm asked to the Postlethwaite dinner. It's a fill-up, of course, but if she counted upon my pride she missed it, as I jumped upon it with both feet," he said as he walked restlessly about the room, lest he should look too long at her and be lost. Her pathetic near-sighted eyes followed him.

"I felt you were there!"

"And yet I suppose you'll go in with Semmes or some other chap from Olympus who was born owning all creation and has the nerve to want jam on it, and I'll be six miles off behind a beastly hedge and take in some dumb, ravenous rococo Englishwoman who won't get on to that elan and verve of manner that have made me"—He broke off abruptly and dashed at an unobtrusive footstool and kicked it under the sofa. Inanimate things had been getting more and more on his nerves lately. He glanced quickly over his shoulder with a foolish smile, prepared to propitiate if she had seen, but apparently she was still laughing at his nonsense about the dinner. He stood before her looking down and said:

"What does it all mean? It's the same thing over and over again—the hunger to please you; the large full blown failure and then a night watch of self laceration."

"I have seen no failures even in the bud. Surely I may judge." One more smile like that up into his face and all would be over. Fortunately she continued as she rose in her slow way that somehow matched the unaroused look in her face:

"Please ring for Shiro. The bell is actually working today! Don't you think it would be nice to have our tea out on the veranda?"

"I think it would be very nice," he replied as calmly as he could.

He was determined not to disturb their relation that heavenly spring. Keep his head he would as long as he could. He was not going to risk anything—that was one sure thing—and be forever shut out from the Seamen's Retreat, as several of the fellows were already. A flirt? Of course she was! There was no need of the chief's everlasting preaching to assure him of that. He wasn't born last week, even if he looked it.

So he lived gratefully from hour to hour with a burning eye on every man she noticed, more especially Semmes, who evidently had Mrs. Helmsby on his side, and to have that was to win in the end. What chance had a beggarly ensign on $1,400 a year and about 10 cents outside of his pay against that combination. None. But it was good to have her all to himself that afternoon, the little tea table between them; good to nibble cold toast and look as long as he would at the bowed profile, the fair, slow fingers busy with some sewing. The Korean sudari bumped softly against the veranda column, where the honeysuckle tossed its tiny censers, and far away below them, over the sunflower hedge, was the bay where the ships came and went.

When Mrs. Helmsby returned with the fire of triumph still alight in her blue eyes, she found the doctor playing battledoor and shuttlecock with the insatiate twins, while Rosamond watered the sunflowers. Shiro followed at her heels, refilling constantly her absurd one pint pot from the yoked wooden buckets that he carried. When the girl stooped and pulled a weed or two from the soft earth around the stem of the "Navigator," Jane saw it in a flash and asked sweetly:

"Did you meet any one in particular while you were out?"

"No, dear," answered Rosamond in that cooing voice of hers.

A week later as Mrs. Helmsby and Rosamond, in hooded jinrikishas, turned in at the Postlethwaite gate, the night of the dinner, their eyes were caught by two strings of lanterns running up the driveway to the front door. They were white, painted with the flags of England and the United States.

"Then both admirals have accepted," said Jane conclusively.

It was the largest house in town and not a bungalow, as Mrs. Postlethwaite was an advocate of second story nurseries. Her authority in that and correlative matters was undisputed, being the unenthusiastic parent of eleven lusty sons and daughters, who were sent in turn on their thirteenth birthdays to England to be educated. Mr. Postlethwaite was much more cordial toward his offspring, but left the equity of the dilemma entirely to her.

The door was opened by the Japanese butler in misfit evening dress, which lacked accord with the orientalism of his low bows and the hissing sound of indrawn breath betokening a wordless deference.

"Top side, piece," he said to the ladies. Halfway up the stairs they were met by a smiling amah in softly rustling silks, who tripped on ahead, ducking sideways like a little gray pigeon every few steps, until she turned them over to an older maid, who stood at a chamber door and whose bearing showed longer contact with mannerless Europeans.

"Good gracious! You're in reg'lar ball dress!" exclaimed a voice behind them as the amah removed their wraps. It was Pussie Bean, and Mrs. Helmsby tingled from head to foot, for Pussie—thirty-seven if she was a week!—had been squarely on her nerves ever since she came out to the station. There was no escaping her, for their husbands were on the same ship, and back and forth all along the China coast they had gone together last year until the state of Jane's nervous system warranted Guy Helmsby's doing what he seldom did—putting down his foot and bidding her settle in Yokohama for the rest of the cruise. And a month later Mrs. Bean followed.

"I'm sure you'll find yourselves overdressed, for Mrs. Postlethwaite goes in so for simplicity," went on the husky voice. Mrs. Helmsby ran her eye over the enemy—the shrewd, withered little face, with its buttonhole mouth; the oily hair, plastered in dark waves on her brow; the same old high necked cotton velvet, smothered on that "occasion" in jets—and then she drawled insolently:

"I have never minded being the best dressed woman in a room—never." Then she gave Rosamond a slow, serious, rotating inspection.

"But how about gloves?" chirped Mrs. Bean, whose unfailing good temper was the very least attractive of her qualities to Mrs. Helmsby. "Ordinarily, of course, but they say she never wears them. And the English are so critical about us! I've mine in my pocket, but"—

"Don't wait for us, I beg, Mrs. Bean. There's something about Rosamond's skirt—amah, one needle and thread, please," interrupted Mrs. Helmsby. As soon as the foe had retreated Rosamond said, with a laugh:

"Isn't the skirt better now?"

"Of course it's perfect, but I won't go down with that Bean woman and be lumped with her. Why, Rosamond, she's fairly reeking with rhinestones!"

The drawing room was full, but silent, save for a sort of reverential purr, as Jane swept grandly in, with Rosamond at her side, bonnier than ever before in browns and yellows and a bunch of jonquils tucked in her broad belt. Before Bert Ackley could reach her she had disappeared behind a black cloud of broadcloth, shoulder to shoulder, solid, brutally opaque.

The hostess certainly went in for simplicity. She was vaguely in white and had the air of disdaining to assist either Providence or the Chinese man milliner in the matter of her appearance. Sir Lionel Ams, the British vice admiral, sulked by the empty fireplace, frankly hungry and unapproachable. His flag lieutenant stood before him and tactfully held aloof the world's hollow anteprandial attentions. The American admiral had not yet arrived.

"Misto' ander Mrs. Hamerton!" announced the butler painfully.

"It's altogether the most esoteric thing that has come under my observation in the east," said Ackley to Mrs. Helmsby, indicating the newcomers.

"What is?"

"Why, Hamerton is a judge and yet he's called mister. Esoteric? It's downright"—

"Oh, I thought you referred to her. You see, she was 'presented' ten years ago, and has dressed, absentmindedly as it were—plumes and all—up to it ever since," murmured Mrs. Helmsby, watching with glee Mrs. Bean's pitiful efforts to smuggle on her gloves under her inadequate handkerchief.

There was a movement near the door, and before the butler could command his tongue the American admiral bustled in, followed by two lieutenants. All the English officers were in uniform, because the moths had got at Sir Lionel's evening dress suit.

"Well, here we are once more, Mrs. Helmsby. How're 'Box and Cox?' Ah—Mrs. Bean! Semmes, that you? Say, Semmes, look here. Who's that devilish pretty woman young what's-his-name has just joined?" Mr. Semmes did not have to follow Admiral Koster's quick glance to answer.

"Miss Ackley, sir, and that's Ackley. She came out and joined her sister while the flagship was at Vladivostok, soon after the rendezvous at Nagasaki."

"Lord, another of 'em!" muttered the admiral to himself, adding aloud:

"Rank has one saddening side to it, Semmes, and don't you forget it. All the pretty women are taken away from me at dinners and things, and I have to sit among ruins more or less picturesque"— A firm hand was laid heavily upon his arm by Mrs. Hamerton, who had overheard. "Um? Ah, yes! Proud to have the honor, madam," went on the admiral smoothly, but he saw she had heard, and took a dislike to her on the spot and only remembered her at apologetic intervals during the dinner, which was immediately announced by the flinging back with a rattle of the bamboo rings of the portieres of a room beyond. The butler then stood, bowed double, his hands on his knees.

Sir Lionel, who went in with the hostess, responded surprisingly soon to the sherry, and he and Admiral Koster tossed squadron stories and deafening laughter across Mrs. Postlethwaite's plate until she was completely benumbed—the two ungrateful old autocrats secretly wishing meanwhile that she was out of the way altogether that they might go that one verbal step farther which adds so to masculine ease.

Mrs. Helmsby had the national hatred of silence, and knowing that the British ball of conversation does not roll easily, owing to worn facets and an aptness to lie where it falls, she quite thrilled when the globe trotter who took her in said after the oysters with quiet impertinence and a manner that showed wear:

"Burne-Jones and all that sort of thing, you are really." She liked it intensely, and her next letter to her husband began abruptly: "Am I a Burne-Jones? I'd take it well if you'd telegraph, but I suppose you won't;" and when in due time his answer came: "You are, my heart; pray make the most of your day. The reign of beauty may begin at any hour," she liked that even better.

Farther down the table Bert Ackley devoted himself recklessly to Miss Prime, the British consul's daughter, who swung the best racket in the east. Exactly opposite were Rosamond and Mr. Semmes. Ackley fancied he recognized the marks of Jane's powerful hand. After the champagne it became evident to the rest of the table that something was wrong down in that direction.

Mrs. Bean was on Ackley's left When once roused she was very witty, after a standard of her own, and all the men about were now leaning forward, urging her on, and nothing was heard but her croupy voice and their mellow laughter. Each husband, being out of reach of his wife, felt a certain sportive elation that gave no heed to the near future. Rosamond signaled an appeal to Ackley's national pride, but he threw his head back and laughed louder than the rest, and presently one of the jonquils bloomed in a buttonhole of Semmes' uniform. Ackley fairly sprang out of his chair when the hostess' stiff nod ended the dinner.

It would have been impossible to convince Mrs. Bean that the quiet way she was ignored by the women when they were alone in the drawing room did not arise from petty jealousy. She had her triumph, however, when the men trooped in and gathered about her two deep to hear how her trunk got exchanged for Captain Brawley's at Cheyenne—she had promised it before they left the table.

The music began promptly, more conversation being a thing abhorrent to the hostess.

Mrs. Hamerton sang relentlessly all the verses of "Bonnie Dundee"—she always did—in a wee voice not in the least suggested by her commanding physique, the entire room softly exploding as one into "Thank you, very much," at the finish.

Without further pressure, she played an intermittent accompaniment for her husband, who cleared his throat and stepped forward at the first note. He was sixty-two, but sang "The Roast Beef of Old England" in a roar that Mrs. Helmsby declared later amounted to a study in hygiene.

Ackley burned with shame to see any shipmate of his make such an ass of himself over a wilted jonquil, stooping incessantly to smell the thing in a way at once silly and impertinently familiar. He for one couldn't stand it, so he pleaded a midwatch and left.

At that moment a servant entered and, after a scraping bow, approached Admiral Koster, who was dozing less obtrusively than Sir Lionel, and handed him an envelope on a lacquer tray. Every one in the room knew it was a cablegram even before the admiral opened it with an apologetic flourish.

To the astonishment of all, he burst into loud laughter, which he instantly tried to turn off into a cough, but without success. The American officers exchanged glances. Sir Lionel sidled up, rather hoping to be let into the fun, but he was disappointed. The paper was put into an inside pocket and buttoned up, and the admiral sought to redeem himself by a frown of deep thought.

"Yes, a little, if you care to hear me," Mrs. Helmsby was saying in the meantime to the host's query. It was the first time she had thought it worth while, but she owed it to the flag to efface the impression Mrs. Bean had made.

"I think I know one or two little things by heart," Jane continued as a book of musical gems bound in 1850 was offered her.

She hesitated a moment, selecting a thin edged wedge; then she began the short, swinging prelude to a bolero, smiling up into Admiral Koster's face as he drew near and leaned an elbow on the piano.

Rosamond broke the circle about her by one lazy motion of her beautiful bare arms. She knew Jane's touch and knew what was coming.

"Cuando los matadores"— Such a rich, sweet, saucy voice, full of laughter and showing years of careful study! The silence as she played the interlude was only broken by a somewhat hazy "Fancy!" from the direction of the globe trotter.

"Cuando en sus mantillas"— it rang out again with a fawnlike abandon. It was all over in a flash, and she rose from the piano. There was a chorus of frank delight, ended by some pathetic voice saying: "If you knew how hungry we all are for music! We haven't been home, some of us, for twelve years."

Then, of course, she gave them her best, song after song, and even the weary old piano woke up and wept or laughed, as she chose. There was one little creole love song that somehow crept into Admiral Koster's heart, and he felt two foolish tears tumbling down his furrowed cheeks, and he got away from the piano and went over by the mantel, where he presently took out the cable message, and this time as he read it he did not even smile.

Mrs. Hamerton made the move to go, followed soon by the rattle of carriage and jinrikisha wheels, the sharp cries of coolies, the "Good night" and again "Good night," and the Postlethwaite dinner was over.

The next morning Ackley went ashore, carrying his tennis racket and wearing his most variegated flannels and happiest cummerbund. He spent the entire day at the Primes' and passed the Retreat at a tremendous pace going and coming.

In the afternoon, just before dinner, as he went over the ship's side he saluted the officer of the deck with the conventional, "Returned on board, sir." There was a merry look in that officer's eyes as he said:

"The captain wants to see you immediately, Ackley. Don't stop to shift into uniform."

As Ackley walked down the quarter deck the chief's head popped up through the wardroom hatch, and he exclaimed, "Congratulations, me boy!" Then he leaned an elbow on the combing and went off into a roar of laughter.

"Sorry to see you off again this way, chief; kill you some day," was Ackley's dry comment, in no mood for wardroom chaff.

"Tell the captain I am on board," he said to the cabin orderly.

The stocky little commander sat by his desk, his elbows resting on the arms of the revolving chair, the tips of his fingers together, and as Ackley entered he bent upon him a frowning look and after giving the cough of a much larger man said sternly:

"I've just come off myself, Mr. Ackley and found this," reaching round for a paper, which he handed to the ensign. "Will you be good enough to explain? I have been under some misapprehension regarding you, it appears."

Ackley read with amazement:

Ensign Bertram Ackley, U. S. Navy, U. S. S. —:

Sir—For violation of the department's general order No. 307 you are hereby detached from duty on board the U. S. S. — and placed on waiting orders. By direction of the secretary of the navy.

Respectfully, PETER KOSTER, Rear Admiral, Commanding U. S. naval force on Asiatic station.

"Three hundred and seven? May I see the order, captain?" the young officer asked, half stunned:

"Certainly, certainly," and the commander wheeled condescendingly once again to the desk and produced a sheet of paper, note size, from which Ackley read rapidly, half aloud:

Naval officers attached to cruising war vessels, especially commanding officers, are expected to leave their families at their usual or fixed places of abode and not to attempt to transfer them to more convenient visiting points. Officers disregarding this injunction will be liable to be relieved from duty.

"By all the powers—the secretary's 'woman order!' This is expensive and excessively rare." Ackley was off his head with relief, and his laugh was good to hear. "I've no family, captain, except on my Spanish estates. Wife? No, worse luck—women don't seem to know a good article when they see it. They don't seem to have that quick commercial"—

"That will do, Mr. Ackley; that will do! I regret to feel obliged to deny myself any of your witticisms."

"I beg your pardon, sir. May I ask the executive officer for a boat, captain? The sooner I get over to the flagship and make my peace with the admiral"—

"The flagship's under way, sir," reported the orderly, appearing suddenly in the doorway. Ackley stared.

"I—er—was about to say, when I got an opportunity, that the admiral signaled over while I was ashore. His next port is Nagasaki, and until then there's nothing to be done but obey orders. Good afternoon, Mr. Ackley.

The chief engineer and the doctor were waiting for him outside the cabin door. They nabbed their prize and dragged him over to the rail, where they leaned watching the flagship head about for the straits. The chief began, actually trembling with the desire to talk it over.

"It would be artistic."

"The mistake was made at the Postlethwaite function. You see, you were both there, and they say the admiral was late"—

Then the doctor lifted up his voice:

"And only half got the names. The truth of the matter being the old man's membrana tympani"—

The chief snapped in:

"And mistook Miss for Mrs., the names being the same. And"—

"Give a man a show, chief," drawled the doctor. "Well, the cable the admiral got after dinner was an order from the secretary"—

"Detaching all the officers who had wives on the station," interpolated the chief at a breath.

"Nothing mean about you, is there?" said the doctor, looking down at the little man by his side, who returned the glance proudly. When they looked around Ackley was gone.

As the senior ensign strode up the hill the next morning toward the Retreat he had made up his mind exactly what he would do. He was going to see Mrs. Helmsby alone and express his regret that her sister's name had been dragged into such public notice; then he was going to say "Goodby" to Rosamond in a jolly, offhand, thanks for a pleasant evening sort of style, and then he would keep away from her till he sailed for China, for he was going to exchange with Barnette on the Palos at Chefu, a thing easily managed. And then—well, there would follow some fights between the bad and the good that he supposed was in him, but he would live—people had a way of living. It got to be a habit.

As he turned in at the gate the muscles about his mouth worked nervously. A few steps, and he caught sight through the lattice of the rickety old summer house of a figure in a blue and white gingham that he knew. He went straight toward it and carried out his plans as well as most of us do.

Upon the center table there was a pretty litter of freshly cut flowers and vases of all sorts of shapes and colors. Rosamond was standing back to get an effect, the pince-nez that Jane allowed her to wear only in the strictest solitude perched upon her nose. She had not heard his approach over the soft grass and started when he greeted her.

"May I sit here, out of the way?" he asked, throwing himself down on the steps at the entrance. Her glasses were already dangling by their cord when she answered coldly, but with her unvarying courtesy, going on with her work. The silence was only broken by the children's voices shouting in the distance somewhere.

GENERAL ORDER NUMBER 307

"What a lovely day yesterday was," came finally from Rosamond.

"Perfect. I noticed it."

"Jane said she supposed you were on duty, as you didn't report to her," and the girl laughed affectedly.

"No, on pleasure," was the brutal answer. The Settlement is small. She knew where he had been, and he knew she knew and was glad of it. He hadn't thrashed around those courts yesterday for nothing—he was pleased to see he could hurt her vanity, if not her heart.

The calliopsis would not sit up properly in the big yellow bowl, and Rosamond seized the whole bunch and danced it impatiently up and down and then let it go, and her brown and golden favorites pitched headlong upon the table.

"Some days flowers act nicely and some days they act like"—

"People?" he suggested.

"Exactly," she assented warmly.

There was a long silence between them. He watched her till his heart ached at the thought of goodby, then he looked away to where the sun glared coldly on the restless bay, where the ships came and went—sometimes forever.

The crow that had come one day to live with them and had been kept for luck just then came hopping over the lawn to see what was going on in the same house. He knew 5 o'clock tea was often served out there, and sweet morsels were to be had for the picking up. Wise as he was, the old karasu could only guess at the time of day, but he saw the occupants, and it was at least worth while to investigate.

"Kawai, kawai," he croaked. Up the steps he jumped—they were so still, these two! He cocked his head on one side and looked Ackley straight in the eyes. He suggested once more, "Kawai, kawai."

The ensign broke into a laugh that warmed his heart clean through. He sprang to his feet and went to Rosamond, and he knew that the end had come.

"Do you understand what he said to me?"

"Yes," she answered, her head bent low.

"What did he say?"

"You know, what he always says."

"Perhaps, but tell me."

"He says—well—there's a Japanese legend"—

"Yes?"

"And they say he says, 'Love, love,'" she almost whispered.

"I had no need of his advice, Rosamond, dear. It's been 'love, love' with me from the first. I love you, and I love you. Don't answer me yet. Just let me say sweetheart, my sweetheart, over and over again." He held her hand with both of his against her breast, his voice was quiet, and he felt satisfied and at rest—for an instant. Then came the old cry:

"I want you, I need you, the worst sort of way. I'm all jarred and jangled without you. Ah, child, tell me, tell me as gently as you can if—Rosamond, for heaven's sake, are you amusing yourself? A man's so helpless"—

Was that the gentle, pliable Rosamond, that girl who sprang back and stood there before him, face white, eyes blazing and lips trembling so they could harly speak? She brought her hand down heavily on the table beside her and said roughly, "Yes, I'm amusing myself. Now go, please."

Then at last he understood, but he did not go. The ancient matchmaker on the top of the summer house focused one beady eye down through a crack and apparently was satisfied, for he flew off with a chuckling croak.

There was no question about it—Barnette of the Palos was a fixture at Chefu as far as Ackley was concerned.

The awakening kiss had been given the beauty. There was a new look on her brilliant face, a new tone in her voice as she talked rapidly on, not seeing his absorption in some illuminating thought of his own.

"And Jane and I had an awful scene about it early this morning, right out there by the hedge. And what do you think I did? Oh, you don't know me at all—Jane said she didn't. I was in such a fury I took the rake I was using and whacked off his head! And Jane declares I fairly glared at her."

"Whose head, dear? I don't believe I quite"—

"Why, the "Navigator's," of course. Look out and see for yourself. And it rolled at our feet, and I felt like a murderer, and—it felt nice! Fortunately at that very second Jane got a telegram from Guy, the funniest thing! Let me see how it went. Oh, yes: 'G. O. 307 has struck; Bean and I detached; be with you first steamer.' You know she always knows everything, so she understood in a twinkling, and she's been crying ever since, she's so absurdly happy. So you see it's the best possible time to win her over. If it were not for the usual flaw of being lumped once more with that dreadful Pussie Bean—but what's the matter? You haven't heard one word I've said!" And her pout gave Ackley an added sense of nearness and claim.

"I've got a bigger piece of news than that," he said, his revery at an end and looking very determined as he laid in her hand—the one he had loaned to her for a moment—his orders of detachment. She read, wondered, laughed and read again, still laughing; then she suddenly stopped and said coldly:

"I see perfectly how the mistake was made. It's the Prime girl, and I'm not one particle surprised." For answer he repeated, with mock solemnity:

"I, Bertram Ackley, take thee, Rosamond Ackley, to be my wedded wife, to have and to hold"—

"O-h, I see!" came a demure interruption.

He went over it briefly, beginning at the dinner; then he cried excitedly, springing to his feet and coaxing her to hers, holding her off at arm's length:

"Rosamond, I've got it! I've got it! And I won't take 'No' for an answer! The secretary thrusts greatness upon me; the admiral walks off; the captain washes his hands of it; the other fellows laugh. Now, I propose we make the blunder—God save the mark!—good, you and I, within three days, before the flagship hitches up anywhere. Isn't it the right, the only, thing to do? Look up, darling; look at me. Now, confess; isn't it artistic?"

He held her face up to him between the palms of his hands.

"It would be artistic," she said softly, closing her telltale eyes.

HOW A LAWYER WON FIRST CASE

At the Metropolitan Club, in Washington, a group of lawyers were discussing the value of expert medical testimony, says the Herald, when a well known criminal lawyer was reminded of a curious case in Richmond some years ago.

"At that time," said the lawyer, "about the most prominent physician in the community was an exceptionally learned and able medico whose name for obvious reasons I cannot give. For the purpose of this story it will suffice to refer to him as Dr. Morgan.

"Now, Dr. Morgan one morning received a visit from a young friend, very recently entered upon his practice before the bar of Richmond, who had just been retained in his first important case. Naturally he was very anxious to win his maiden effort, and it was with reference to certain phases of the case that he sought the advice of his old friend, the doctor.

"The young lawyer explained to the doctor that he was greatly perplexed. It was a poisoning case and the youthful attorney had been retained to defend the prisoner, a young woman of whose innocence he had no doubta. It was, however, the lawyer explained, not an easy thing to prove the girl guiltless of the crime.

"An intelligible motive can easily be assigned for the crime by the prosecution,' said the lawyer, 'for the reason that her husband, the murdered man, was elderly, rich and ill tempered to a degree that made her life a burden. Moreover, the wife is the only heir. Now, I have reliable information to the effect that counsel on the other side will offer medical testimony to show arsenic poisoning.

"'You say that you are positively convinced of the young woman's innocence?

"'Positively,' was the young lawyer's reply. The girl is innocent, but the evidence is overwhelmingly in favor of the state. It will be easy to prove that the pair lived unhappily, that it was an uncongenial marriage, and that the traces of arsenic were found in the old man's body after a suspiciously sudden death'.

"The case looked like a bad one. Dr. Morgan was very quiet and thoughtful for some moments. Then he said: 'The medical experts will probably produce in court the glass tubes containing the drug. You must ask them whether they tested the tubes for arsenic before they experimented with the fluids.'

"'I see the point,' eagerly interrupted the youthful attorney. And if they should admit that they neglected to make that test?'

"'Then you will put your question in this form: 'Is not arsenic used in the manufacture of some kinds of glass?'

"The lawyer acted on the doctor's suggestion. The principal medical expert seemed taken by surprise, and finally admitted, after some beating about the bush, that he had not tested the tubes for arsenic. He was also induced to concede that arsenic was sometimes used in certain kinds of glass.

"The young counsel, having obtained these two answers, was clever enough to cease his cross-examination on that point.

"When he came to the summing up of the case he dwelt at length upon the possibility that the arsenic had been 'sweated' out of the glass, and said the neglect of the experts to test the tubes should certainly be considered as vitiating to a large degree, if not wholly, the medical testimony.

"Well, the young woman was acquitted. As the other evidence was purely circumstantial, the acquiting verdict was given mainly because the dangerous force of the medical testimony had been weakened by the old doctor's ingenious suggestion."

READY TO INVADE CUBAN REPUBLIC

Army and Navy at Moment's Notice Will Leave for Island.

HOPE OF SECURING PEACE

Secretary Taft Has Induced Factions to Appear and Submit Their Contentions to American Arbiters. His Plans are Promising.

(By Cable to The Morning Star.)

Havana, September 22.—Secretary of War Taft sees a way tonight of saving the sovereignty of the Cuban republic.

He admits that he has a tangible plan but will not disclose its exact character. It is not a victory for either political party but contemplates radical concessions by both.

The Secretary's programme is yet embryonic and depends upon the patriotism of the Moderate and Liberal leaders, both of whom have shown confidence in the mediators by naming delegates with definite powers of attorney to treat for heir respective parties.

This action by Messrs. Taft and Bacon is regarded as the most important yet taken. Negotiations on a new basis will open immediately, and it is believed that eventually the opposing delegates will be brought together at United States Minister Morgan's villa at Mariana with President Roosevelt's mediators as referees.

Secretary Taft took up the matter diplomatically, with the result that Consul General Steinhardt and Captain McCoy, military aide to President Roosevelt, drove in an automobile to the presidio here where they saw Secretary Montavo and got his consent for the release of Jose Miguel Gomez and four others of the leading alleged conspirators. The latter returned with them to Minister Morgan's house, arriving there at 7:30 this evening. Meanwhile Machado and Ferrera, the rebel leaders in Santa Clara province, had taken an automobile here and gone direct to the rebels' camp outside Marianao, returning with General Del Castillo and Pino Guerra, respectively the leaders of the revolt in the provinces of Havana and Pinar del Rio, which were on horse back.

Arriving at Marianao they went to the house of the local president of the Liberals, Baldomera Infante, where they held a preliminary session. On the arrival of the prisoners from Havana all went to Mr. Morgan's house and the conference, upon which all persons felt rested the success of the others to settle matters wihout American intervention, proceeded.

Not since the efforts at mediation began have such interest prevailed. Crowds thronged the streets surrounding Mr. Morgan's villa and with suppressed exciement awaited the arrival of the result of the negotiations.

Washington, September 22.—Vigorous work is in progress in preparation for any possible eventuation of the trouble in Cuba. There is greater activity in both the army and the navy than at any time since the war with Spain. Careful and sysemetic arrangements are being made in every branch of the military service for active work in the field. A formidable fleet of American warships already is in Cuban water and the army only awaits a signal from President Roosevelt to move in force to Cuba.

Detailed plans for an invasion of Cuba have been worked out by the general staff of the army. When General Frederick Funston left Washington this afternoon for Havana he knew precisely what troops would be ordered to Cuba, in the evtnt of a decision by the President in favor of armed intervention; how those troops would be mobilized; from what ports in this country they would embark for the island; and what means the government had secured for the transportation of the invading force.

It was admitted at the War Department today that the troops for service in Cuba already had been selected and that they were being prepared fo the campaign. No intimation of either the number or the present location of the troops, however was obtainable. In the view of well informed officers, it is believed the force detaled for Cuban service numbers at least 5,000 men and that it will consist of infantry, cavalry and light artillery. It is expected that the troops if ordered to Cuba will be mobilized at Norfolk and Newport News and a part of them, possibly, at Port Tampa, Fla. While the War Department has not at its disposal just now on the Atlantic coast a sufficient number of transports to carry an expeditionary force of 5,000 men, it has been arranged to use for the transportation of the troops nearly a score of harbor boats each of which is able to carry about three hundred men and their necessary equipments and supplies.

The three great supply bureaus of the War Department—the quartermaster's commisary and medical—are prepared to take care of the army and all of them are engaged in working out the details of an expedition. Horses and mules are being purchased in the West; medical and subsistence supplies are being bought in large quantities at some of the eastern depots; and anticipatory arrangements for he railroad transportation of troops are being concluded.

The general saff, aside from determining the number and character of the troops to be employed in Cuba, is not idle. Maps of a special kind alreaiy have been printed which cover the latest obtainable information of the topography of the island and plans have been worked ou for the forces after it has landed in Cuba.

BLOODY RACE RIOT IN GEORGIA CAPITAL

Whites Reported to Have Killed Thirty Negroes· Militia Called Out—Frequent Assaults on White Women Cause of Trouble.

(By Wire to The Morning Star.)

Atlanta. Ga., September 22.—Four attempts at assault on white women by negroes within or near the limits of he city today wrought white citizof the city today wrought white citizment tonight. The assaults of the day followed two others of a similar nature within a week, and at least half a dozen others within the last two months, and brought a climax tonight. At midnight Governor Terrell issued an order calling out eight companies of the fifth infantry and one battery of light artillery. This order was not issued until three negroes had been killed and fifteen taken to the hospitals, five o' whom will die. These include only those cases of which the police have official knowledge. The local newspaper men claim the number of dead is larger.

The mob begun its work early in the evening, pulling negroes from street cars and beatting them with clubs, bricks and stones. Negro men and women, riding to their homes after the work of the day, were ruthlessly torn from the cars or attacked on the streets. In a few cases the negroes retaliated during the early part of the night, but after 10 o'clock they were scarce in public places. The fire department was called out to disperse the mob on Decatur street, a street most frequented by negroes, and for a time seemed to hold the crowd at bay. The police reserves were called out and will hold the fort un... the troops can be mobilized. The mob seemed to lack leadership and this doubtless has prevented greater slaughter.

There is great confusion on the streets but the mob seems to lack a leader and at midnight the police seem to have control of the situation. The number of dead so far is uncertaain and reports from police headquarters conflict with the number given by newspaper reporters. Three are known to be dead and a large number of negroes have been seriously beaten.

Night of Rioting.

The disturbance here tonight has taken the form of an active and bitter race war. The incidents of the day which were given in numerous extras by the local papers early this evening added immensely to tne usual Saturday night crowds on the streets. A negro walking along Whitehall street, the principal shopping section, was attacked about 7 o'clock, beaten and escaped wtih but few clothes. The news of this attack spread rapidly and within a few moments the appearance of a negro was the signal for a riot. The negroes scattered from the streets, going to their homes by back alleys or flocked to Decatur street, the home of the tougher negro element.

Soon street cars were attacked and negroes going to their homes were taken from the cars and beaten, stamped upon and in several cases fatally hurt.

The barbor shops where negroes were employed next became objects of attack. One of the hardest fights of the night took place about the postoffice. A negro barber shop across the street was the object of attack and in less time than it takes to tell it the shop was wrecked and he negroes were beaten, one to death, theother, the proprietor, escaping by aid of the police.

On Peters street near the terminal railroad station a hard fight took place. This was started by a negro shooting at the crowd below from a second story window. A brick hit him and he fell back and died in a few moments. One negro, who was found with a pistol in his hand, was beaten to death on Forysth street viaduct in the center of the city and a block from the Associated Press office.

At the present hour, 1:30 A. M., the downtown streets are quiet, occasionally a member of the local militia passes and is jeered and hooted by the mob. The possibility of retaliation by the negroes is among the serious things discussed in the streets and newspaper offices tonight.

Alarming Reports.

Atlanta, September 23.—(1:30 A. M.)—Reports are being received from the outskirts of the town of rioting and negroes being killed and driven from their homes. Rumors have it that at least 25 to 30 or more negroes have been killed here tonight but it is impossible at this time to confirm these reports.

Crowds are standing on street corners down town apparently awaiting developments. All is quiet in the center of the city.

Militia Slow to Report.

Atlanta, September 23.—(1 A. M.)—The mil...a has been called out but seems to be very slow in mobilizing. At present there is ...tle excitement in the center of the city. Fighting is reported on Peters street near the Terminal station. From the Associated Press office shots are heard frequently.

The Constitution is authority for the statement that fifteen negroes have been killed. One negro is lying dead less than a block from the Associated Press office, on Farsyth street

BRUTE GIVEN THIRTY LASHES

Delaware Negro Got Terrible Whipping and 50 Years Penitnntiary Term.

ASSAULTED WHITE WOMAN

Crowd of Two Hundred People Witnessed Agony of Criminal As Cato-nine-tails Raised Welts on His Back.

(By Wire to The Morning Star.)

Wilmington, Del., September 22.—Before the eager gaze of nearly 500 people, Charles Conley, the negro who was a few days ago sentenced to fifty years imprisonment and to receive thirty lashes, for committing an atrocious assault and battery upon Mrs. Beatrice F. Rankish and her daughter, Miss Gussie Leith, two weeks ago, was publicly whipped today in the yard of the New Castle county workhouse. While there have been many whippings at the jail in the past, none attracted such interest as that of Conley. More than 2,000 people clamored for admission to the workhouse yard which was too small to accomodate all of them.

Conley walked to the whipping post and stood witnout a tremor as his wrists were fastened in to the iron bracelets. Warden Messerve took his position and with the crowd standing at breathless attention administered the punishment. The heavy whip with its nine leather tongues, each about a sixth of an inch in diameter fell across the culprit's bare back with a force that raised a large welt. This was repeated thirty times, an assistant warden momotonously keeping audible count. Conley never uttered a sound until the sixteenth stroke when an agonizinz "Oh!" was forced from his lips and was repeated until the last blow fell upon the quivering flesh.

Although the lashes were well laid on they were carefully distributed so that no blood was drawn. The man's back, however, when the castigation was completed, was a mass of dark welts and ridges almost from shoulders to waist. Conley staggered slightly when he was released but was able to walk without assistance to his cell, where he entered upon his sentence of imprisonment for half a century.

SAILORS STOLE ALASKA GIRLS

Terrible Stories from American Whaling Ships Confirmed.

Seatle, Wash., September 22.—The steamer Harold Dollar, which arrived yesterday from the North, whither it carried provisions to the ice-bound whaling fleet, reports that twelve are still in the North.

The man who returned on he Dollar tells stories of terrible suffering on the different ships, one of the principal causes being the lack of food on the different vessels. They also claim that charges have been preferred against a number of the whaling captains, among whom are Captain Bodfish, master of the Bayliss, Captain Neuth, master of the Janette, and Captain Tilson, formerly of the Alexander and present master of the Janette, in the absence of Captain Neuth, who with Captain Bodenish is under arrest. The men also confirmed the stories of the stealing of natie girls from their homes for immoral purposes, and say that full depositions regarding these charges of brutality and of insufficient feeding are made against Captain Thurston and also against Captain John Cook, master of the Beluga.

The Democrats in Wood county, Texas, yesterday in mass meeting, instructed their Senators and Representatives to vote against U. S. Senator J. W. Bailey an account of his alleged acting as the secret and confidential agent of corporations pursuing "policies inimical to the interest of the people of Texas and of the United States."

TENTH DISTRICT SENATOR.

Convention Met Yesterday at Wallace —Democratic Speeches

(Special Star Correspondence.)

Wallace, N. C., Sept. 22.—The Sentorial Convention of the Tenth District was held at Wallace today. This district is composed of the counties of Pender and Duplin. Pender having the Senator in the last Legislature it fell to Duplin to name the candidate this time. Hon. Thomas Perrett, of Faison, a life long Democrat, Confederate soldier and for 35 years a business man of Duplin, is the nominee. No district in the State will have a ruer man in the next General Assembly. The convention was called to order at 2 o'clock with D. S. Hines as chairman and Messrs. T. H. Wells, of Pender, and J. A. Shine, of Duplin, secretaries. Mr. Wells is the nominee of Pender county for the House of Representatives and that county will be safe in his hands. Mr. Wells made a good speech before the convention and assured Duplin that the good old county of Pender would roll up a big Democratic majority. Messrs. Perrett and Shine made strong Democratic speeches.

To My Democratic Friends,

I am not ungrateful and I would feel that I had fallen short of my duty did not express to you my sincere appreciation of the honor you have conferred on me in electing me to the position of Register of Deeds of the grand old county of New Hanover.

As you are aware, I am no stranger to the duties of this position; having heretofore held it several terms through your generous support; and I point to my record in the past as a guarantee of faithful discharge of the duties of the office hereafter.

Going to School

Going to school is the most important part of a boy's life, and he should have durable, good fitting clothes.

We're schooled in the art of providing boys' clothes. We've learned our lesson by practical experience.

BOYS' SCHOOL SUITS

Cheviots in Black, Blue and Fancy Mixtures, well made and the best moderate price suits we know of. Prices from $1.50 to $3.00.

Double-breased, or Norfolk Suits of pure wool in Fancy Cheviots and Scotches; Extra well tailored. Prices from $3.50 to $5.00.

Double-breasted and Norfolk Suits of the very best of Fancy Cheviots and Worsteds, Excellence in every detail of tailoring and make up. Prices from $5.50 to $7.00.

Don't send the boy to school next Monday without a new suit. He's been promoted, new class room, new studies—now get him a new suit.

Six Per Cent Mortgeges.

Mortgages are a class of securities by themselves; their values are not dependent upon public fanchises, nor are they suoject to legislative attack or official investigation; neither is their value depreciated by aggressive competition or corporate mismanagement.

Many of the largest and most conservative life insurance companies in the world invest largely in mortgages, as experience has taught them that this is one of the safest and most profitable ways to invest money.

If you have funds to invest in this manner consult us.
